Learning through activities

The activity-based learning is an effective method which creates a visible improvement in a child's understanding, learning and psychology.

To begin with, activity-based learning simply implies that the child plays an active role in their own learning where he learns by doing. Tools like three-dimensional models, experiments, puzzles, flash-cards, role play methods, and so on are used to engage the child where they learn by being involved in these activities. Various activities related to the ongoing topics are taken every week to make learning fun.
